ON THE CURBSTONE.

I HAVE been somewhat interested in politics during the past few weeks. Indeed, if appearances count for anything the whole town has been wild. This has been, without exception, the warmest campaign I have ever known in this country. There was a large amount of money expended by the various candidates and an acrimony worked up that, in many cases, was exhibited to an offensive degree. We all had our likes and dislikes, personal as well as political. As for myself, I was especially anxious to see "Honest John" Montgomery in the Sheriff's office and a change in the administration of the county affairs. I am satisfied. The strength of the "ring" was broken and the Republican party has demonstrated that it is no infant in this country. We would have liked the whole pie, but the portion we have gained is quite acceptable.

I saw a rather neat trick played at the election last Tuesday. The 100-foot limit was strictly kept and it was supposed that no "workers" were allowed to come within the sacred space. Yet whenever a Mexican came to the polls he was accompanied to the ballot box by an "interpreter." And this, too, when the officers of election understood more than enough Spanish for all purposes necessary.

SOMETHING rich happened at the western precinct polls. Chalmers had just sent in a Mexican with a straight Democratic ticket. The vote was challenged on legal grounds. Chalmers was called up, as an attorney, to decide the point. He gave his opinion, and, needless to say, the vote was accepted.

THERE was a large force of police on duty that day, but no necessity occurred for their services. The Chief was somewhat officious and rustled around seeking whom he might capture. His eye was especially keen for any protuberance of the hip pocket. A small boy gave the Marshal a tip during the day that another certain had a pistol in his pocket. The peace officer immediately arrested the indicated desperado. A prompt search brought forth the pistol, but it was one of the glass pattern, to be loaded with whiskey. And a mob of urchins stood around and yelled and jeered in a frenzy of delight.

Speaking of pistols reminds me of an episode in New Mexico along in '80. A stage coach was held up near Socorro.

The passengers were stood in line by the two knights of the road and searched for valuables. One of the travelers, a little Hebrew drummer, seemed almost wild with fright. His hands wobbled as they were held above his head, and the robbers paid little attention to him. The weak hands flopped around aimlessly for awhile; then, when the robbers were not looking, suddenly descended to the level of the neck, two shots rang out quick and sharp, and the stage robbers dropped, each with a ball in his body. Large coat collars were worn in those days, and the inoffensive little drummer carried a self-cocking revolver at the back of his neck.

CURT MILLER, of the Tempe News, has been an enthusiastic Democrat for several years. The Saturday previous to the election there were to be meetings of both political parties in his town. A special train came puffing in from Phoenix about 7 p. m., and Miller seized his torch and sallied down to join the procession. But, alas! it was a Republican train and Miller and his torch formed a melancholy procession of one to the equally melancholy Democratic meeting at the upper town.

Court will commence next Monday and the administration of justice will flow on in its more or less even course for several months. It will enliven the town some and will do to fill in the time between now and the meeting of the Legislature.

Does't you know, there is a good deal of farce about some parts of the court work. Now there is the Grand Jury's investigation of the different county officers. A few committees, often composed of men who are excellent hands at the plow, but wouldn't know the difference between a stylus and a credit balance, solemnly promenade around the Court House and make such reports as "we find the books of the District Attorney kept in a workmanlike condition." The spirit of the law is well enough, but if its provisions are poorly carried out the system becomes a farce.

The little white worms that dangle around from the trees are an innovation at this time of the year. They are not due until the balmy springtime.

That fountain in front of the Hartford Bank is a blessing. It is not very comely in appearance, but it serves as the only watering trough in town.
